President (Feinstein): Thanks to those who were on the call for the BOT meeting for the budget discussion. The administration is examining all options for saving measures, including furloughs over the summer for those employees who are not able to work whose roles are not required due to the pandemic. At this point, we have not decided whether UNC will be open for inperson classes this Fall.

Provost (Anderson): Enrollment is looking down about 274 student deposits for Fall. We are awaiting additional guidance from the CDHE regarding how to proceed with Fall operations. For those currently in the tenure review process, Academic Affairs is finishing up reviewing dossiers and will be communicating with those faculty members in May. The colleges are transitioning to the ASC models; staff members will start their new offices officially on May 15th. We are proud of the level of engagement between faculty and students this Spring in making the abrupt transition to online learning. We are aiming to provide a more robust structure for online delivery in Fall and we are hopeful that face-to-face options will be available in some capacity. We need to leverage UNC's strengths such as our brand as the premier teaching institution in the State and our smaller classes taught by high quality faculty - to make us an attractive option for students.

Board of Trustees (Fischer):Almost 300 people tuned into the BOT meeting and the following Q/A session.

13. Comments to the Good of the Order

- Luger – Normally we would be having a reception at the last Senate meeting of the year, where we acknowledge outgoing Senators. Another tradition is the handing of the gavel to the new Chair. I would like to thank Andy and Mark for inviting me to the extended cabinet and deans council meetings; I hope that sets a precedent to continue with the next Senate Chair. I would also like to thank Betsy who has gone above and beyond the call of duty in her role supporting faculty governance
- Feinstein– It has been a pleasure to work with Stan as Senate Chair. Thanks for your contributions and for the baking lessons.

14. Adjournment

- The meeting adjourned at 4:45pm
